

Worcester: Famous for...

Unveiling...

We are rightly proud of the things that have made Worcester famous around the world, but 358 years later we still have no commemorative monument to the thousands that died at the Battle of Worcester on 3rd September 1651.

It was the last battle of the English Civil Wars and finally secured parliamentary democracy as the form of government for this country and, in time, for many more around the world.

Kenneth Potts, the sculptor of Elgar, has been working on a model for a monument to right a very long-standing wrong.

A monument of the size and impact he envisages would be a focal point for our civic pride and a major attraction for visitors to our City... We invite you to see his vision unveiled!

The Commandery, Sidbury
3rd September 2009

6.00 pm - Doors open
6.30 pm - Unveiling

(by Lord Faulkner of Worcester
& The Mayor of Worcester)

Battle of Worcester Society
3rd September 1651

FREE - All are welcome.
www.battleofworcestersociety.org.uk

"And do Englishmen so soon forget the Ground where Liberty was fought for?"
John Adams, 2nd US President, Worcester, April 1786